

04.03.2006

04.03.2006

04.03.2006

I do not believe this bike was originally electric. It does have a front and rear light (which I hope to have working soon from a generator). The lights and generator do not appear to be original.

The folding mechanism looks as if it was damaged and the release for this part is unquestionably a fix for a lost or destroyed original part. We're pretty much stop or go here -- single speed, coasting brakes. The tires are 20 x 1.75.

The quick releases are all old and read Brevettato on the release tab, the quick release clamps read Brevetto "ursuss."

All of the stickers read Amica. The stickers are blue text with white background and red highlighting. The logo also uses silver in the text. The only other item on the bike that could (in a really long shot) help to identify the bike is an old City of San Jose 5-year bicycle license sticker, license #108512.

I can't wait to get this bike on the road, it will be fun in my rural neighborhood. And when I figure out how to fold it without clocking myself with the handlebars, just think how much more fun I'll be having!

p.s. to administrator: if these photo files are too big please kill them or do whatever you need to do, I understand.

Attached Thumbnails

04.03.2008

04.03.2008

PRODOTTO
CARNIELLI
MADE IN ITALY

04.03.2006